SKOOLGO

Malala Yousafzai is a young Pakistani activist who rose to international fame for her fight for girls' education. Born in the Swat Valley of Pakistan in 1997, Malala was just 11 years old when she began writing a blog for the BBC about her life under Taliban rule. Her blog quickly gained attention, and she became a prominent advocate for girls' education, speaking out against the Taliban's ban on girls attending school.

In 2012, Malala was targeted by the Taliban and shot in the head while she was on a school bus. Miraculously, she survived and was airlifted to a hospital in the UK for treatment. Despite her injury, Malala did not let it slow her down and continued to speak out for education rights, even giving a speech at the United Nations in 2013.

Malala's bravery and determination inspired millions of people around the world, and she has become one of the most influential voices in the fight for girls' education. In 2014, Malala was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, becoming the youngest-ever Nobel laureate.
